

EUF's unique comparative Legal Study updated for 2013

The EUF's unique overview analysis of the legal and regulatory environments in Europe (and a number of important comparator countries) has been brought up to date in 2013 with an extensive review and revision of member countries' positions. The EUF considers that this document now represents the only comprehensive analysis of its type available to the Industry, its regulators and lawmakers, associated support service providers and anyone with an interest in the effective finance of business.

The study consists of 13 questions which investigate the key aspects of receivable financing and factoring and its value lies in bringing this important information together in one place for analysis, comparison and review.

Details on how to access this report and its unique perspectives are available on the EUF website.

John Gielen, Independent Chairman of the EUF noted: "This legal study is a significant contribution to developing a common understanding of the opportunities and challenges that exist for the factoring and Commercial Finance industry to contribute to the real economy of Europe, supporting business, economic growth and employment."
